DISGRUNTLED LAWYERS
AFTER B. S. RODEY'S SCALP

That a trio of disgruntled lawyers, by inflaming the minds of a native faction, succeeded after a stubborn fight in pushing through the lower house of the Porto Rico legislature a memorial asking for the removal of Judge Bernard S. Rodey, a former delegate in congress from New Mexico, and the abolishment of the court, is stated by the Washington correspondent of the El Paso Times.

The correspondent further points out the delicate situation in which the matter places Tullio Larrinaga, Porto Rico commissioner at Washington, and a man whom Rodey has befriended.

The news of the progress of the fight on Mr. Rodey will be of considerable interest.

Mr. Larrinaga is also well known in Albuquerque, having been a prominent figure at the irrigation congress last fall.
